Jamie Morin

National security & technology executive, board member, educator and senior advisor
Washington, District of Columbia, United States

Summary

Jamie Morin is the Executive Director of the Center for Space Policy and Strategy, part of The Aerospace Corporation’s nonprofit Federally Funded Research and Development Center. Additionally, as VP of Defense Strategic Space, he leads Aerospace’s technical support to the Pentagon, Project West Wing’s technical intelligence support, and Aerospace’s Economic and Market Analysis Center.

Prior to joining Aerospace, he served for eight years in a series of senior leadership roles in the Department of Defense. Jamie was confirmed by the Senate as Director of Cost Assessment and Program Evaluation on June 25, 2014, and served in that role through January 2017. As director, he led an organization responsible for analyzing and evaluating the Department's plans, programs, and budgets in relation to U.S. objectives and projected threats. To support better defense decision making, CAPE develops analytic tools and methods for analyzing national security planning and the allocation of resources, and ensures that the costs of DoD programs are properly estimated.

Prior to joining CAPE, Morin served for five years as the Assistant Secretary of the Air Force for Financial Management and Comptroller. As the Air Force's chief financial officer, he was responsible for the formulation and efficient and effective use of the Air Force’s annual budget of more than $110 billion.

From July 2012 until April 2013, he was also appointed by the President as Acting Under Secretary of the Air Force, serving as the service’s chief management officer, senior energy official, and chair of the Air Force Space Board, as well as acting Secretary of the Air Force during absences of the Secretary.

From 2003 until 2009, Morin was a member of the professional staff of the U.S. Senate Committee on the Budget, serving as the committee’s lead analyst for the defense, intelligence, and foreign affairs budgets, responsible for drafting relevant sections of the congressional budget resolution and advising the Senate on enforcement of budget rules.

Active in a wide variety of professional, charitable and community efforts, Jamie currently is the vice chairman of the board of the HALO Trust USA, an international landmine clearance charity. He is a fellow of the National Academy of Public Administration and an associate fellow of the American Institution of Aeronautics and Astronautics.
